Introduction to Compendium

As part of the Now is the Time (NITT) Project AWARE initiative, the NITT Technical Assistance Center, in partnership with the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), released an issue brief entitled Mental Health and Academic Achievement.

According to research cited in the brief, approximately one in six school-age youth experience difficulty in life functioning due to a mental health or behavioral health issue. The most prevalent mental illnesses among school-age youth include attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), behavioral or conduct problems, anxiety and depression. Unfortunately, less than half of young people with a mental illness receive adequate treatment or support. Schools are one of the most likely places where mental health concerns among young people will be detected, and school personnel have an unparalleled opportunity to connect youth with appropriate prevention, support, intervention and treatment resources. Early detection of mental health concerns can lead to improved academic achievement, reduced disruptions at school and more positive outcomes in life in general.

The purpose of this compendium is to provide a foundational source of information about online mental health, social-emotional and behavioral health resources school personnel and mental health professionals can share with children, adolescents and their families who are coping with mental health and behavioral health issues. This compendium includes a general section that highlights national organizations, each having a vision and mission to provide information and support for individuals with mental illnesses and their families. In addition to the general section, the compendium includes sections for each of the following mental health and behavioral health concerns:

- Anxiety Disorders;
- Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder;
- Autism;
- Bipolar Disorder;
- Bullying (in general and of LGBT students);
- Dating Violence;
- Depression;
- Eating Disorders;
- Human Trafficking;
- Sexual Assault;
- Substance Use and Abuse;
- Suicide;
- Self-Harm/Non-Suicidal Self-Injury;
- Trauma.

We hope this will be a helpful resource for school personnel who want to share online mental health and behavioral health resources with their students and families; however, we also encourage individuals and schools utilizing this compendium to consult other sources for additional resources when selecting the most appropriate mental health and/or behavioral health resource(s) to meet the needs of their students and families. This compendium is not an exhaustive list of resources available. It should be used as a foundational starting point to provide information and support to young people and families who may be experiencing mental health and/or behavioral health concerns. When considering sharing a resource with youth and families, the resource should be evaluated on a variety of dimensions, including its appropriateness for the intended use (content and population fit), its usability (ease of use) and the developmental and educational level of the information.

Brief Description

The American Psychiatric Association is an organization of psychiatrists working together to ensure humane care and effective treatment for all persons with mental illness, including substance use disorders. It is the voice and conscience of modern psychiatry. Its vision is a society that has available, accessible, quality psychiatric diagnosis and treatment.

The mission of the American Psychiatric Association is to:
- Promote the highest quality care for individuals with mental illness, including substance use disorders, and their families;
- Promote psychiatric education and research;
- Advance and represent the profession of psychiatry; and
- Serve the professional needs of its membership.

Resources Provided

The American Psychiatric Association offers:

- General Information: Information for patients and families about common mental disorders, including symptoms, risk factors, and treatment options. Provides answers to questions written by leading psychiatrists, stories from people living with mental illness and links to additional resources.
- Find a Psychiatrist: Provides a useful search engine for finding a psychiatrist in the individual’s area.
- Share Your Story: Provides an outlet for individuals to share their own personal experiences, and for others to engage and find personal anecdotes possibly of assistance to them.
- Guide to DSM-5: Provides a helpful tool for understanding and interpreting the language of the DSM-5 in order to obtain the most valuable information for an individual’s particular experience.
The American Psychological Association’s mission is to advance the creation, communication, and application of psychological knowledge to benefit society and improve people’s lives.

The American Psychological Association does this by:

- Encouraging the development and application of psychology in the broadest manner.
- Promoting research in psychology, the improvement of research methods and conditions, and the application of research findings.
- Improving the qualifications and usefulness of psychologists by establishing high standards of ethics, conduct, education, and achievement.
- Increasing and disseminating psychological knowledge through meetings, professional contacts, reports, papers, discussions, and publications.

The American Psychological Association aspires to excel as a valuable, effective, and influential organization advancing psychology as a science. The core values that guide their mission include pursuit of excellence, knowledge, diversity, and ethical action. Their strategic plan goals are to maximize the association’s organizational effectiveness, expand psychology’s role in advancing health, and increase recognition of psychology as a science.

Resources Provided

The American Psychological Association offers:

- Topics: Extensive scientific research organized by topics of interest, helping to inform and guide those seeking help with issues that affect their personal lives, professional lives, and emotional wellness.
  - “How to Choose a Psychologist”
  - “Science of Psychology”
  - “Psychology and Ethics”

- Publications & Databases: Various books, databases, journals, magazines, newsletters, reports, and videos are all provided and organized by publishing type and subject.

- Psychology Help Center: Online consumer resource featuring information related to psychological issues affecting an individual’s daily physical and emotional well-being.

- News & Events: News about what is currently happening at APA and in the general field of psychology.

Brief Description

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) is the agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services that leads public health efforts to advance the behavioral health of the nation. SAMHSA’s mission is to reduce the impact of substance abuse and mental illness on America’s communities. Congress established the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) in 1992 to make substance use and mental disorder information, services, and research more accessible. Prevention, treatment, and recovery support services for behavioral health are important parts of the health service systems for the community. The services work to improve health and minimize costs to individuals, families, businesses, and governments. However, people suffering from either substance use or mental disorders, or both, because of their illness are often excluded from the current health care system and instead have to rely on "public safety net" programs. The gap in service to this population unnecessarily jeopardizes the health and wellness of people and causes a ripple effect in costs to American communities.

Resources Provided

- Find Help & Treatment: Locators of nearest treatment centers, along with hotlines.
- Topics: Alphabetic list of various topics to search for more information.
- Programs & Campaigns: Information, training, and technical assistance, for all parts of the country, on delivering high quality programs.
- Grants: Funds are available through the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention, the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment, and the Center for Mental Health Services. Find funding opportunities that support programs for substance use disorders and mental illness, and learn about the grant application, review, and management process.
- Data: Providing data both nationally and for individual states, including lists of programs SAMHSA is evaluating.
- Publications: Numerous publications are available, covering a variety of topics with some of the publication free of charge.

Other

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration has a presence on social media through Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, the SAMHSA Blog, and RSS feeds (https://www.samhsa.gov/social-media/connect-samhsa).
MentalHealth.gov provides one-stop access to U.S. government mental health and mental health problems information. MentalHealth.gov aims to educate and guide the general public, health and emergency preparedness professionals, policy makers, government and business leaders, school systems, and local communities. It aims to display a national dialogue on mental health.

Resources Provided

- Mental health definition, facts, myths
- What to look for in each disorder
- How to talk about mental health
- How to get help

Other

Main focus is on stories of recovery and how to stop communities from stigmatizing mental health.

Anxiety Disorders

Anxiety disorders are characterized by excessive fear and worry, such as the following (NIMH, 2016):

- Generalized Anxiety Disorder — characterized by excessive worry for months, including several of the following symptoms:
  - Restlessness or feeling wound-up or on edge;
  - Being easily fatigued;
  - Difficulty concentrating or having one’s mind go blank;
  - Irritability;
  - Muscle tension;
  - Difficulty controlling the worry;
  - Sleep problems.

- Social Anxiety Disorder (or social phobia) — characterized by the fear of social or performance situations, typically including the following symptoms:
  - Feeling highly anxious about being with, or talking to, other people;
  - Feeling self-conscious in front of others and worrying about being embarrassed or offending others;
  - Fearing that people will judge them;
  - Worrying about a social event for days or week ahead of time;
  - Difficulty making and keeping friends;
  - Blushing, sweating or trembling when around other people;
  - Feeling nauseous or sick when around other people.

- Panic Disorder — characterized by recurrent, unexpected panic attacks, which typically include the following symptoms:
  - Intense fear;
  - Palpitations, pounding heart or accelerated heart rate;
  - Sweating;
  - Trembling or shaking;
  - Feelings of shortness of breath, smothering or choking;
  - A feeling of impending doom.

Everyone experiences fear or worry at times, but when these are interfering with one’s daily functioning, it is likely an anxiety disorder (ADAA, n.d.). In anxiety disorders, these fears result in physical symptoms related to “fight or flight” responses, as well as avoidant behaviors. These anxiety disorders differ in the types of objects or situations that lead to anxiety, fear and avoidance but share in common that the fear and anxiety is persistent and out of proportion to the object or situation.

Many anxiety disorders develop in childhood and tend to persist into adulthood without proper treatment. Anxiety disorders are the most common mental disorder among adolescents. It is estimated that approximately 31.9 percent of adolescents (ages 13 to 18) have had an anxiety disorder at some time in their lives. Anxiety disorders occur more often in females than males (prevalence rates of 38 percent and 26.1 percent, respectively; NIMH, 2017).

Anxiety disorders among children and adolescents increase the risk of the development of other psychological disorders, continued psychological problems in adulthood, and problems with academic performance and peer relationships (McLaughlin & King, 2015; Mychailyshyn, Méndez, & Kendall, 2010; Patton et al., 2014). Use of research-supported treatments and interventions for anxiety disorders can improve outcomes for affected individuals. Anxiety disorders are medical conditions and should be treated as such; it is important to seek treatment if you are suffering from an anxiety disorder (ADAA, n.d.).

Brief Description

The Anxiety and Depression Association of America (ADAA) is a national organization that works to provide answers and resources for professionals and people dealing with an array of anxiety disorders including general anxiety disorder, post-traumatic stress disorder, obsessive compulsive disorder, panic disorder, specific phobias, and other related conditions.

Resources Provided

ADAA offers:

- Understanding the Facts: A collection of webpages that provide basic information on a number of anxiety disorders, including information on symptoms and treatments with links to helpful videos and other related information.
- Live and Thrive Resources: A collection of web pages providing information and resources targeted at specific demographic groups such as women, children, older adults, and military families. Webpages include links to relevant videos and brochures.
- Find a Therapist Database: A free database of therapists throughout the United States (as well as across 10 other countries) that specialize in anxiety, depression, OCD, PTSD, and other related disorders.
- Screening Tools: A collection of self-screening tools for anxiety disorders and other related disorders. Also includes tools to screen children or family members for anxiety disorders.
- “Triumph” e-Newsletter: A free monthly newsletter for people interested in learning about anxiety disorders and related illnesses to make informed choices about getting help. Newsletters provide information to help readers learn about the disorders, find resources, discover relevant events, and learn more about how ADAA can help.
- Podcasts: Podcast interviews with experts on a variety of topics related to anxiety, depression, OCD, PTSD and other disorders, including podcasts about children and teens.
- Mental Health Apps: A list of apps with reviews by ADAA member volunteer mental health professionals. Reviews include information about the targeted disorders, features of the app, and pricing information. Apps are rated for effectiveness, personalization, interactive/feedback, and research evidence.
- Webinars: Free monthly webinars intended for the general public on a variety of topics related to anxiety, depression, and related disorders. Recent webinar topics included overcoming a fear of flying, back-to-school anxiety in high school and college, and overcoming anxiety related to terrorism.

Other

ADAA maintains an online store that offers resources for purchase, including webinars, DVDs, and registration for conferences.
The Andrew Kukes Foundation for Social Anxiety (AKFSA) is an organization whose mission is to educate social anxiety sufferers, mental health and educational professionals, physicians, family, and the general public about social anxiety disorder and partner with other organizations to help people get treatment. The organization was founded by the parents of Andy Kukes, who died by suicide after years of dealing with social anxiety and depression, a commonly co-occurring condition for people with social anxiety disorder.

Resources Provided

- Understanding social anxiety: A collection of basic information including a video series about social anxiety symptoms and treatments as well as information specific to social anxiety in children and teens.
- Video collection: A collection of videos about social anxiety, including stories and insights from sufferers, family members, and professionals about the disorder.
- A database of recent research: A collection of easy-to-understand summaries of the latest research articles, searchable by target audience (sufferers, family friends and mentors, and professionals). Article summaries include features such as a video summary, a quick summary of the main points, and key takeaways.
- Network of informed professionals and organizations: A list of professionals and organizations knowledgeable about social anxiety disorder treatment, organized by state. AKFSA also provides phone support and suggests that if you can't find a professional organization near you that you call AKFSA to help find support.
- Support on social media: AKFSA holds monthly live stream video sessions via the social media app Periscope. Mental health professionals from the AKFSA support network lead discussion on topics related to social anxiety and viewers can use the app to ask questions in real time. Subjects are announced on the AKFSA twitter page (@AKFSA).

Other

AKFSA promotes spreading awareness about social anxiety through social media. On their “Spread the Word” page they post stats, articles, videos, and messages (for Twitter and Facebook) to share with friends and followers on social media.

Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)

Attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) is a developmental disorder characterized by difficulty with attention, hyperactivity and impulsivity. Subtypes of ADHD are characterized by difficulty primarily with attention, primarily with hyperactivity/impulsivity, or by difficulties with both. The prevalence rate among children and adolescents (ages 2 to 17) who have ever been diagnosed with ADHD is around 9.4 percent (Danielson et al., 2018, as cited by CHADD, 2018). Among adults, the prevalence rate is around 2.5 percent (DSM-5, 2013). ADHD is more common for males than females, occurring with about twice the frequency for male children (DSM-5, 2013).

ADHD begins in childhood and can cause significant functional impairment. The lists below provide examples of some of the symptoms associated with key deficit areas. Many of the deficits associated with ADHD relate to difficulty with executive functioning, which refers to goal-directed planning, organization and self-regulation. Children with ADHD often have trouble in school and with peer relationships and lower self-esteem. As they get older, they are more likely to engage in risky behaviors, including substance abuse (DSM-5, 2013; Graziano et al., 2015). In adulthood, people with ADHD tend to have more difficulty sustaining employment and doing their jobs successfully, as well as maintaining interpersonal relationships.

Inattentive Symptoms:
- Difficulty sustaining attention to tasks (particularly non-preferred tasks);
- Losing things often;
- Forgetfulness;
- Difficulty following instructions;
- Distractibility;
- Difficulty paying attention to details;
- Difficulty organizing tasks and activities.

Hyperactive/Impulsive Symptoms:
- Difficulty being still; fidgeting or squirming;
- Excessive moving (leaving seat, running, climbing) in situations where not appropriate;
- Talking excessively, difficulty playing or doing leisure activities quietly;
- Difficulty waiting turn, interrupting.

In addition to these challenges, people with ADHD also tend to have attributes that can be helpful, particularly when provided with the right environment. Many children with ADHD can be described as creative, innovative, energetic and eager to please (Sherman, Rasmussen, & Baydala, 2006). Symptoms of ADHD, such as shorter attention span and poor planning also can be adaptive in contexts that require being alert to the environment and flexible in reacting to change. Understanding the strengths and challenges of children with ADHD, and the interaction of these unique characteristics with the environment around them, can help parents, teachers and schools work with children with ADHD in ways that set them up for success and positive outcomes (Sherman, Rasmussen, & Baydala, 2006).

The mission of the Attention Deficit Disorder Association is to provide “information, resources, and networking opportunities to help adults with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder lead better lives.” The organization organizes programs and support groups to foster connections between adults with ADHD, including resources specific to college students and dealing with workplace issues. The website also provides general information about ADHD and ADHD related issues and resources for those seeking professional support.

Resources Provided

- Opportunities to connect: Through virtual support groups (including a group specifically for college students; available to members only), volunteer opportunities, the ADDA ambassador program, and conference events.
- Quick facts about ADHD
- Screening tool: A printable adult ADHD screening questionnaire
- A library of resources: Spanning 36 categories including diagnosis, research, brain science, health/fitness/nutrition, organizing, relationships, parenting with ADHD technology, women with ADHD, book and product review, and many more
- A monthly newsletter
- Weekly webinars: Many are available to members only; non-members can receive three as part of a “starter kit,” and there are occasional free webinars available
- Directory of professionals: A searchable directory with professionals with particular specialties listed by city, state or province. Specialties represented include coaches, advocates, attorneys, psychiatrists, psychologists, schools, tutors, and more.

Other

The Attention Deficit Disorder Association is entirely volunteer-run and relies on paid memberships for funding. Some of the services and resources they provide are only available with a paid membership. These resources include weekly webinars, member-only sections of the website where there are archived past webinar recordings and newsletters, and access to online support groups. There are memberships for families, individuals, professionals, and students, and costs can be found on the website.
Autism

Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) is a developmental disorder that affects an individual’s communication and behavior (NIMH, 2018). ASD is typically characterized by:

- Difficulty with social interactions and/or communication;
- Repetitive behaviors (for example, repeating phrases or actions over and over);
- Restricted interests;
- Impacted sensory processing and motor skills.

Diagnoses that used to be separate (such as Autistic Disorder, Pervasive Developmental Disorder - Not Otherwise Specified, and Asperger Syndrome) are now classified under the umbrella term of ASD. Currently, about one in 59 children are diagnosed with ASD. Autism occurs similarly across racial, ethnic and socioeconomic groups. However, it is four times more prevalent among boys than girls (CDC, 2018).

ASD can be reliably diagnosed around age 2; however, many individuals are diagnosed later (CDC, 2018). Early intervention is key in working toward positive outcomes for individuals with autism; therefore, parents are recommended to talk to a doctor or request an evaluation as soon as they suspect their child may be showing signs of autism. Previous research has demonstrated high rates of mental health issues among individuals with autism, particularly anxiety disorders (Russell et al., 2016). The best outcomes for individuals with autism, and their families and caregivers, occur when evidence-based interventions and supports are provided as early as possible.

Brief Description

The Vanderbilt Kennedy Center (VKC; at Vanderbilt University) works to solve the mysteries of developmental disabilities and human development from an interdisciplinary approach, forming partnerships between researchers and clinicians in behavior, education, genetics and neuroscience in order to make breakthroughs in prevention and treatment. VKC’s programs apply the latest knowledge obtained through research and provide service models so that services can be offered to people with disabilities, families, educators, and healthcare and other service providers. They also reach out to the community for opportunities to learn more about the science of developmental disabilities and the needs and strengths of the people affected by them. As a result, their research, training, and services are focused and effective, having a strong impact on communities.

Resources Provided

Vanderbilt Kennedy Center offers the following Autism-related materials/resources:

- Autism Parent Guide: Information for Parents of School-Age Children: Available in English or Spanish
- Autism Parent Guide: Information for Parents of Toddlers and Preschoolers: Available in English or Spanish
- Autism Spectrum Disorders Tip Sheet: Tips and resources for families
- Autism Tip Sheet for Librarians: Tips and resources for librarians
- Selecting a Behavioral Services Provider: Tips and resources for parents
- Evidence-Based Practice for Treatment of Autism Spectrum Disorders: Tips and resources for families
- Faith Community Visual Supports: Developed with the Vanderbilt Kennedy Disabilities, Religion, and Spirituality Program; visual supports for religious/spiritual use
- Healthy Bodies Toolkit: Available in English or Spanish; A Parent’s Guide on Puberty for Girls/Boys with Disabilities
- No-Tech and Low-Tech AAC for Children with Autism Spectrum Disorders: A Guide for Parents: Available in English or Spanish; provides information on what AAC (Augmentative and alternative communication) is and what different options there are
- Parent’s Guide to BloodDraws for Children with Autism: This pamphlet presents ways for parents (and child) to cope with the stress and worry that may come with blood draws
- Parent’s Guide to Psychological Evaluations for ASD: For parents whose pediatricians recommend their child be evaluated for an autism spectrum disorder
- Peer Intervention and ASD Tips and Resources: Tips and resources for teachers
- Planning Life After High School for Students on the Autism Spectrum: Available in English or Spanish; this guide is for Tennessee families, but tips can be useful for others as well (may ask school personnel, such as school psychologists, etc. about your state’s laws and procedures
- Provider’s Guide to Blood Draws for Children with Autism: This toolkit provides a guide to strategies that healthcare providers can use to help children with ASD more easily complete routine medical procedures and blood draws while reducing the stress felt by patients and their parents.
- Strategies to Improve Sleep in Children with Autism Spectrum Disorders: A Parent’s Guide: Many children with ASD have difficulty with sleep. This informational booklet provides parents with strategies to improve sleep in their child affected by ASD.
• Sleep Strategies for Teens with Autism Spectrum Disorder: An informational booklet for families of teens with ASD
• STAT-MD Training Workshop: A workshop for pediatric healthcare providers to improve early identification of ASD
• Tips on Autism for Health Care Providers: Information on recognizing signs of Autism and early identification
• Toilet Training and Autism Spectrum Disorders: Available in English or Spanish; pamphlet for parents/caregivers of young children with ASD who are beginning the process of toilet training
• TRIAD Program Flier: TRIAD (Treatment and Research Institute for Autism Spectrum Disorders) is an institute whose goal is to improve assessment and treatment services for children with ASD and their families, while advancing knowledge and training.
• TRIAD Social Skills Assessment: This is an assessment for ASD, involving parent report, teacher report, observation, and direct child interaction. The examiner should have knowledge of autism characteristics, communication, and social skill development. The intent is that this instrument be administered by special educators, speech-pathologists, licensed therapists (e.g., occupational therapist, physical therapist), or school psychologists.
• Visual Supports and Autism Spectrum Disorders: This brochure discusses the use of pictures or other visual items to communicate with a child with autism who has difficulty understanding or using language.

Brief Description

The Virginia Commonwealth University's Autism Center for Excellence (VCU-ACE) improves services and supports for individuals with autism spectrum disorder (ASD) by promoting the implementation of research-based practices in schools and the community through training, technical assistance, research, and collaboration.

Resources Provided

ACE provides the following information and resources:

- Training & Education: Includes providing professional development to expand the expectations, knowledge, and skills of those who live with, educate, and support individuals with ASD. It supports the sustainable implementation of research-based practices by providing instructional activities and resources to anyone who wants to learn more about ASD and to leaders who guide professional development initiatives in home, school, community and work. Includes the following sections: Online courses, Webcasts, How To video series, Inclusion roundtable podcast, Just for parents, For educators, For paraprofessionals, For administrators, CEUs & recertification, College & university coursework, FAQ's, Seminars, The tiered model, Trainings around Virginia, Transportation, Virginia skill competencies, Virtual learning communities.

- Resources: This page provides quick access to information, websites and resources available on a number of topics related to ASD. Each topic contains top-rated resources found online, both on the VCU-AVE website and on other websites. Includes the following sections: ACE factsheets and briefs, Ask the experts, Classroom snapshot, Autism Spectrum Disorder, Behavior, Communication, Early intervention, Evidence-based practices, Families, Paraprofessionals, Screening and diagnosis, Transition to adulthood.

- Research: As part of their mission to promote quality programming for students with ASD, VCU-ACE conducts, reviews, and disseminates research into innovative and practical solutions to create successful outcomes for individuals with ASD in school, work, and life. This database includes peer-reviewed articles as well as the Inclusion Roundtable podcast. You can search for articles by keyword, population(s) served, type(s) of intervention, program characteristics, research design(s), whether it is peer-reviewed, and the year it was published.

- PARAPRO: The VCU-ACE PARA (Professionals in Autism Resource and Achievement) Project provides professional development for paraprofessionals who serve students with ASD and the teachers with whom they work. This section includes an online course, course feedback, information for administrators, guidelines and legal information, and House Bill 325 and training standards.

- Technical Assistance: Includes facilitating, implementing, and evaluating systems-change initiatives customized to the unique needs of stakeholders in educational and community environments, regions, and the Commonwealth. It supports the sustainable implementation of research-based practices by providing team facilitation, coaching, strategic planning, and project management in agencies, school divisions and direct services settings to build the capacity and confidence of those who support individuals with ASD. Includes the following sections: Communities of leaders in Autism, School division-wide intervention, Administrator support, and Communication.

- News: Provides news on what is new at ACE. This part of the website includes the following sections: Across Virginia, In research and intervention, Archived eNewsletters, and Archived news.
| About Us: This part of the website explains VCU-ACE’s vision, mission, and core values. It includes the following sections: What is ACE, About this site, Advisory council, Collaborators, Contact us, Funding, Join our mail list, Meet the staff, Projects, and Research. |
Bipolar Disorder

Bipolar and related disorders, formerly known as manic depressive illnesses, are characterized by severe shifts in mood that negatively impact functioning. When people have bipolar disorder, their moods vary between elevated, manic and depressed moods. Manic moods can be described as abnormally elevated or irritable. When people are experiencing a manic episode, they have increased energy and engage in a high level of activity. Symptoms of manic moods include inflated self-esteem, extreme talkativeness, decreased need for sleep, racing thoughts and engaging in activities that will likely have negative consequences (for example, shopping sprees or risky behaviors). Depressed moods are characterized by feelings of sadness, emptiness or hopelessness and by the loss of interest or pleasure in most activities. In addition to these feelings, symptoms of depressed moods include significant loss of weight or appetite, insomnia or hypersomnia, fatigue, feelings of worthlessness or guilt, difficulty concentrating and thoughts about death or suicide (DSM-5, 2013).

Bipolar disorder affects between 1 and 2 percent of the population; although, it is possible this is an underestimate, as there is evidence that bipolar disorder is underdiagnosed (Fagiolini et al., 2013). Bipolar disorder most commonly onsets in late adolescence or early adulthood, but children also can develop bipolar, as can adults later in life (in their 60s or 70s). Men and women are affected by bipolar disorder at roughly equivalent rates (DSM-5, 2013). Genetic factors likely contribute to the development of bipolar disorder.

People with bipolar disorder often experience problems with work, relationships and alcohol use disorders. Bipolar disorder also is associated with an increased risk for suicide, as high as 15 times that of the general population (DSM-5, 2013). Many people with bipolar disorder are able to function normally between episodes of mania and depression. Medication and self-management approaches to treatment can help many people successfully manage manic and depressive episodes (Geddes & Miklowitz, 2013).

Brief Description

The International Bipolar Foundation (IBPF) is an organization created by parents with children affected by bipolar disorder to improve understanding and treatment of bipolar disorder, provide resources for individuals and caregivers, and reduce stigma about bipolar disorder through education.

Resources Provided

IBPF offers:

- Resource database: A database of resources searchable by topic and location. Topics include advocacy, blogs, mentoring, and online therapy, among many others.

- Behavioral Health Quality of Life Questionnaire and Health Plan: An online tool that provides recommendations for treatment plans based on an online questionnaire (approximately 10 minutes).

- Healthy Living with Bipolar Disorder Book: A book for people living with bipolar disorder and their caregivers, including sections on bipolar disorder broadly, healthy living, and resources (e.g., medication charts, mood chart, exercise journal). The book is available as a free downloadable PDF or as a Kindle or hard copy. PDF versions are available in several languages.

- Webinars: Live webinars are available most weeks, and webinars are recorded and posted to the website. A list of upcoming webinars is available on the website. Topics covered include:
  - Ways to manage bipolar at home
  - New treatment options
  - Personal stories of people who successfully live with bipolar and their strategies
  - How bipolar impacts different aspects of life

- Blogs: Approximately 40 active bloggers maintain monthly blogs about topics related to bipolar including therapy, relationships, family, pregnancy, and exercise.

- YouTube Question and Answer series: A series of YouTube videos in which experts answer common questions about bipolar disorder. Example topics include:
  - How do I help my significant other understand bipolar disorder?
  - What is the difference between temper tantrums and bipolar disorder?

Other

The IBPF website includes information on how to get involved through events such as lectures and fundraising events as well as through legislative advocacy. A list of upcoming events is available on their website. Volunteer opportunities are also available.
Category: Bipolar Disorder - Facing Us Clubhouse

Brief Description

The Facing Us Clubhouse is a program developed by the Depression and Bipolar Support Alliance (DBSA). Facing Us is an interactive resource intended to provide inspiration and support for those living with depression or bipolar disorder.

Resources Provided

The Facing Us Clubhouse includes many resources:
- Journal: A place to journal about worries and fears in a safe, private place; to reflect; to write creatively; or to express gratitude. Users can personalize the journal’s appearance.
- Wellness Plan: A step by step program for creating an action plan to take control of wellness—both short and long term. The plan is intended to provide a map for living a more balanced and healthy life and prepare users and those who support them for difficult moments that might come up.
- Wellness Book: A personal book of tips/advice to help you live better. Users can read tips shared by others and submit their own to include in their personal books. Users’ books are private. They can personalize their book’s appearance and include as many tips as they want.
- Media Room: A collection of video and audio presentations to calm and uplift users. Example media resources include meditations, yoga, video stories, an art gallery, and comedy clips.
- Resources: Links to additional information and resources about mood disorders.
- Creativity Center: Includes online workshops to help users learn to use their creativity and wellness tools and podcasts featuring musicians, authors, researchers, and artists talking about the creative process.
- Wellness Tracker: The Facing Us Clubhouse connects with the Wellness Tracker also created by DBSA.
- Connect Resource: A program that can send e-postcards to others. Users can invite others to join or send other kinds of greetings (e.g., birthday, thinking of you).

Other

To use the Facing Us Clubhouse, users need to create an account. Creating an account is free, and accounts are private and secure. Full privacy information is available on the website. Creating an account allows users to save data in their journal, wellness plan, etc. and come back to it later. You have the option to share de-identified data from the Wellness Tracker with DBSA to help DBSA determine whether the program is working.
Bullying

Bullying refers to aggressive behavior that happens repeatedly over time and involves an imbalance of power (Smith, 2016). It is not the typical conflicts or arguments that occur between peers; it includes specific factors, such as an imbalance of power (for example, physical strength, popularity, access to embarrassing information) and/or repetition (happens more than once) (stopbullying.gov). There are mental health and social emotional concerns regarding victims of bullying, as well as those individuals who are engaging in the bullying behaviors, so it is important for parents and educators to work to prevent and intervene in these situations. Additionally, there are certain groups of individuals who are at higher risk for being the victims of bullying behaviors. These include individuals with disabilities, as well as LGBTQ individuals (described in a section below).

Cyberbullying

Cyberbullying (bullying that takes place over texting, on the internet or via social media) has become prevalent due to the widespread use of smart phones and social media. Although this typically takes place outside of school hours, it usually occurs between classmates (Smith, 2016). This type of bullying often includes the sharing of embarrassing, harmful or private information (stopbullying.gov).

Bullying of LGBTQ Students

LGBTQ bullying is a subset of bias-based bullying, which is bullying based on one’s prejudices against a particular group (Evans & Chapman, 2014). This type of bullying is a widespread problem with serious short- and long-term effects (GLSEN, 2014; Russell, Ryan, Toomey, Diaz, & Sanchez, 2011). Furthermore, there is very little in the way of protection for victims of LGBTQ bullying (GLSEN, 2015; GLSEN, 2014; Swearer, Espelage, Vaillancourt, & Hymel, 2010).

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief (http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/LGBTQ_Bullying_Brief_FINAL.pdf) that describes the problem of LGBTQ bullying in schools and offers suggestions for ways in which youth-serving adults can make a difference. Research studies have repeatedly reported that LGBTQ students are much more likely than their non-LGBTQ peers to experience bullying in school (Berlan, Corliss, Field, Goodman, & Austin, 2010; Birkett, Espelage, & Koenig, 2009; Human Rights Campaign, 2012). For example, 51 percent of LGBTQ students, compared to 25 percent of non-LGBTQ students, reported experiencing verbal harassment in a 2012 study (Human Rights Campaign, 2012). Bias-based bullying has been found to be associated with a multitude of negative health, academic and social outcomes in its victims, including in LGBTQ students (Birkett et al., 2009; Duong & Bradshaw, 2014; GLSEN, 2014; Rivers, 2011; Robinson & Espelage, 2013). Furthermore, some studies have even suggested that victims of LGBTQ bullying may experience more severe outcomes than victims of other types of bullying (Evans & Chapman, 2014; Patrick, Bell, Huang, Lazarakis, & Edwards, 2013; Swearer, Turner, Givens, & Pollack, 2008). The Project AWARE Ohio information brief includes information on:

- School Experiences of LGBTQ Youth;
- Bullying of LGBTQ Students;
- Lack of Protection;
- Ways to Make a Difference; and
- References.

Many schools offer very little in the way of protection for LGBTQ students and victims of LGBTQ bullying (GLSEN, 2014; Swearer et al., 2010). For example, according to the 2013 GLSEN National School Climate Survey, frequent teacher intervention in cases of verbal harassment was only reported by 18 percent of LGBTQ students (GLSEN, 2014). Anti-bullying programs in schools often neglect to include LGBTQ students (Swearer et al., 2010). Only 10 percent of students nationwide and 4 percent of students in Ohio reported the existence of anti-bullying policies at their schools that are comprehensive (enumerate ‘sexual orientation’ and ‘gender identity’) (GLSEN, 2104).
This compendium highlights organizations that promote acceptance, understanding and diversity by providing awareness-raising education, support for LGBTQ individuals and their families and online forums to create an empowered community.

Brief Description

PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center actively leads social change so that bullying is no longer considered an accepted childhood rite of passage. PACER provides innovative resources for students, parents, educators, and others, and recognize bullying as a serious community issue that impacts education, physical and emotional health, and the safety and well-being of students.

PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center aims to help by:
- Promoting a shared conversation and response to bullying in which everyone works together responsibly and collaboratively to create safe environments for students.
- Inspiring entire communities to get involved with social change and promoting kindness, acceptance, and inclusion.
- Offering classroom activities, toolkits, and lesson plans for educators.
- Providing informative guides for parents to understand the dynamics of bullying, help their children through bullying situations, and learn how to communicate with school staff.
- Educating students with age-appropriate resources and information to manage bullying situations, be supportive of their peers, and act to prevent bullying in their school, community, and online.
- Creating school-wide opportunities to address bullying, including National Bullying Prevention Month in October and Unity Day, initiatives both founded by PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center.

Resources Provided

PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center offers:
- National Bullying Prevention Month: Sponsored by PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center, this is a campaign to educate and raise awareness about bullying prevention. There are many ways to get involved.
- Resources: This section of the website provides answers to questions, statistics, facts, information related to cyberbullying or students with disabilities, information handouts, access to a book club, free bookmarks, Unity Day posters, and websites for kids and teens (KidsAgainstBullying.org and TeensAgainstBullying.org).
- Classroom: Lesson plans and toolkits are available for educators to use in their classrooms/schools to educate students, staff, and the community on bullying prevention.
- Videos: These videos were created by PACER or sent in and are based on the themes of bullying prevention, kindness, acceptance, and/or inclusion.
- Stories: These are stories submitted by students expressing their feelings about bullying, how they think it affects students and schools, things they have done to prevent bullying, and/or what others can do to prevent bullying. Stories and videos can be sent to Bullying411@PACER.org.
- Get Involved/Campaigns: This provides individuals with opportunities to get involved in bullying prevention campaigns or to be an ambassador or peer advocate.
- What Parents Should Know About Bullying: This provides parents with the definition and impact of bullying, laws and policy, ways they can help their child, tips for working with the school, and information about mobile and online safety.

Teaching Tolerance is a project run by The Southern Poverty Law Center. The website includes many articles about a variety of topics for anyone to read. The topics tend to revolve around how to handle difficult conversations about identity, elections and challenging topics for some to discuss appropriately. There is also a professional development tab with educational materials such as presentations, classroom strategies, and reflective teaching strategies to help teachers instruct children k-12 about diversity and tolerance of differences. There is a complete tab with classroom resources as well, which consist of lesson plans to help promote these conversations properly in the classroom. Film kits include names of films that have been made to illustrate different historical events. Mix It Up Lunch Day is held on the last day of October each school year and children are advised to eat with someone different and expand their comfort zone. There are also webinars for teachers to watch for examples of raising awareness in schools and how to implement different strategies.

Dating Violence

According to the National Center for Victims of Crime, teen dating violence is controlling, abusive and aggressive behavior in a romantic relationship. It can happen in straight or gay relationships and can include verbal, emotional, physical and/or sexual abuse (The National Center for Victims of Crime, 2017).

Examples of controlling behaviors include not letting a dating partner hang out with their friends; calling or paging frequently to find out where they are, who they’re with and what they’re doing; telling them what to wear; and having to be with them all the time. Examples of verbal and emotional abuse include calling a dating partner names; jealousy; belittling them; threatening to hurt them or someone in their family; and threatening to hurt yourself if they do not do want you want. Examples of physical abuse include shoving, punching, slapping, pinching, hitting, kicking, hair pulling and strangling. Examples of sexual abuse include unwanted touching and kissing, forcing a dating partner to have sex, not letting them use birth control and forcing them to do other sexual things (The National Center for Victims of Crime, 2017).

Victims of teen dating violence are more likely to experience negative consequences, such as doing poorly in school, not attending school due to feeling unsafe, abusing alcohol and drugs, feeling hopeless and sad, attempting suicide, developing a negative body image, taking diet pills/laxatives, becoming overly dependent on others, becoming pregnant, having a sexually transmitted disease and becoming uncomfortable with their sexuality. In addition, victims may find it difficult to establish intimacy with a romantic partner, become a positive member of society, develop a personal value system and establish an adult identity.

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief (http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Teen_Dating_Violence-What_Schools_Parents_and_Youth_Need_to_Know.pdf) that describes teen dating violence and provides guidance on what schools, parents and youth need to know and how they can help.

Teen Dating Violence Statistics
One in three U.S. teens has been a victim of dating violence, and about one in three has committed relationship violence (Ybarra et al., 2013). Of high school students in a dating relationship, 9.6 percent have been physically hurt on purpose (being hit, slammed into something or injured with an object or weapon) by a boyfriend or girlfriend (CDC, 2015), and 10.6 percent have been forced to do sexual things (being kissed, touched or physically forced to have sexual intercourse) by a boyfriend or girlfriend (CDC, 2015). Violent behavior in dating relationships often begins between the ages of 12 and 18 (Department of Justice, 2006). Only 33 percent of teens who were in abusive relationships ever told anyone about the abuse.

Brief Description

That’s Not Cool is an organization that targets teen dating violence. It is unlike many other supportive organizations because its main focus is on digital abuse and bullying. The organization is meant to support and help teens going through violent situations and to help change that. That’s Not Cool predicts that teens are the way to change teen violence, and they want to do everything they can to change the statistics. The organization sets out to accomplish this in ways such as games and activities to make dating violence prevention educational yet interesting.

Resources Provided

The That’s Not Cool initiative provides a variety of resources:

- Respect Effect App: Using your mobile device, you can become part of a community interested in spreading respect and different examples of respect, as well as complete different fun challenges, such as “listen to a friend talk about their day for 3 whole minutes.” You can also share your results through these challenges and be rewarded in a fun way.

- Ambassador Program: You can volunteer to be an ambassador of the program in your own community and help raise awareness about a particular issue that affects your family, friends, and the general public around you.

- CoolNotCool Quiz Cards: Here you can play a fun interactive game surrounding the topic of dating violence and unhealthy relationships. You can test your knowledge over what is appropriate in a relationship using their convenient quiz cards.

- Adult Ally Tools: Here adults can find helpful resources, like support materials and helpful tips, in order to do their part in engaging individuals in their community.

- Social Hub: The program provides a general social network for individuals seeking to get involved in the conversation and being alerted of what’s going on throughout the initiative.

- Ambassador Stories: Here you can find a number of different anecdotes about ambassadors’ particular individual experiences through their involvement in the campaign, and how they have started the conversation over dating violence in their communities.

Depression

Depression and other depressive disorders are classified by feelings of pessimism, sadness, discouragement and hopelessness. They also can cause somatic and cognitive changes that significantly affect one’s capability to function. The major differences between each individual disorder is the duration of the depression and the etiology (DSM-5, 2013). Symptoms of depressive disorders vary in severity and type. Symptoms can be physical, mental or both. Some signs of depression include feelings of guilt, appetite and/or weight change, thoughts of death and suicide, persistent sadness, or loss of interest in pleasurable things. It also is important to note that depression may look different among children and adolescents, compared with adults. For example, children and adolescents who are depressed may display increased irritability or agitation (Anxiety and Depression Association of America).

Many factors play a role in developing depression. Stressors are the leading cause of depression and can impact the level and duration. Stressors can be things such as divorce, loss of a loved one, getting fired or not getting a job. Stressors vary with how severe they are and how long they occur before the onset of depression. There are also biological factors that play a role. Genetic influence impacts depression variance by 31-42 percent. Research has shown that dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin are highly biologically involved as well (Butcher, Hooley & Mineka, 2010).

As far as treatment goes, there are three main avenues one suffering from depression can take, one being medications, such as Selective Serotonin Reuptake Inhibitors (SSRIs) or newer generation drugs such as Effexor and Wellbutrin. The second option for treatment would be of the more invasive routes with things such as Electroconvulsive Therapy (ECT), Transcranial Magnetic Stimulation and/or Bright Light Therapy. The third option is behavioral activation and interpersonal therapy, which is less intensive but still successful (Butcher, Hooley & Mineka, 2010). None of the treatment options are better than the other; they all work in different, yet effective ways.

Brief Description

The HelpGuide is a guide to inform and educate families and friends about how to provide useful help to a loved one suffering from depression. It talks about recovery and how assisting a depressed person really changes the revival process. Although helping a loved one recover is fulfilling, it is also tiring and takes a lot out of the person offering help. This guide recognizes that and helps maintain a balance between helping too much and losing one’s self in the process. The HelpGuide goes over 6 firm rules to follow to achieve success when helping a loved one but, at the same time, staying emotionally stable. The guide also discusses briefly what it is like to have depression and how they can’t “fix” their loved ones. The “do’s and don’ts” are addressed in regard to phrases and things to acknowledge. The risk of suicide is discussed and how it is something to be taken very seriously. The website also makes it a clear priority to have the hotline number listed.

Brief Description

The iFred is a website designed to focus on depression and different forms of it. The main goal of iFred is to eliminate the stigma that accompanies depression and instead shed a positive light on it. It is a foundation for research and to educate people on depression. On the home-page, there is an explanation under each subheading of a depressive disorder. The website also offers options for getting help for people suffering from one of the many depressive disorders, for people with friends suffering from depression or depressive disorders, and a questioning link that helps determine if one has depression or not. There is a section that is dedicated to getting involved with iFred and depression that offers donations, “staying informed” information, sharing your story and shopping hope. Shop hope is a section that talks about iFred’s message and what they strive to achieve as a foundation. The website also talks a little bit about the founder, Kathryn Goetzke and what she has contributed to the organization.

Resources Provided

- About iFred: This tab has sub links to things such as iFred’s mission, their gratitude wall, the collaborators and board of directors, advisory board and information about their founder, Kathryn Goetzke.
- Find Support: Under this sub link there are different kinds of support such as individual support, suicide hotlines, ways to donate, ways to say informed, a place to share your story and wall for hope, which includes stories about different people and depression.
- Understanding Depression: Here is your basic information about types, causes, stigmas and comorbidity of depression. There is also a depression test and management options of depression.
- Our Work: This section covers what the foundation does in terms of outside projects and schools for hope.

Eating Disorders

Eating disorders are defined as negative emotions, attitudes and behaviors that result from issues with weight and food (National Eating Disorders Association). Many male and female youth display maladaptive eating patterns that have the potential to develop into an eating disorder. For example, more than half of adolescent girls and a third of adolescent boys try to control their weight in unhealthy ways by skipping meals, vomiting, taking laxatives or fasting. Given the large number of adolescents who struggle with establishing healthy eating behaviors, along with the fact that 95 percent of people with an eating disorder are between 12 and 25 years old, it is critical for school personnel to understand eating disorders and learn how to effectively intervene to help students (National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders, 2016).

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief (http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Eating_Diseorders_Brief.pdf) that focuses on the impact of two eating disorders on youth: Bulimia nervosa (BN) and anorexia nervosa (AN). BN is characterized by the eating of large amounts of food in short periods of time (binge eating) followed by compensatory behaviors to prevent gaining weight. BN also involves feeling out of control during binges, and self-esteem is overly dependent on body image (National Eating Disorders Association). AN is characterized by inadequate food intake and a low body weight, which can lead to starvation, excessive weight loss and, in extreme cases, death. The Project AWARE Ohio information brief includes information on:

- Understanding Eating Disorders Among Youth;
- Risk and Protective Factors;
- How Schools Can Help:
  - Administrators and/or Mental Health Professionals;
  - Teachers;
  - Communicating with Parents.
- References.

Awareness of eating disorders is crucial, as AN has the highest mortality rate compared to other eating disorders (Fairburn & Harrison, 2003). Eating disorders also are very hard to treat, as individuals do not want to come forward and often have a hard time talking about their experiences. Also, it is hard to know which type of therapy might be beneficial because there can be variability in experiences, situations and effects. The websites below highlight some of the organizations that are available to both individuals with eating disorders, as well as their family members who might be affected. There are many organizations working to raise awareness of different eating disorders and to support those in need. In this way, individuals can find support networks, classes, blogs, stories and awareness activities for them to become involved in. As eating disorders continue to become an increasing issue, these organizations are providing support and becoming more crucial in the recovery process.

The organizations highlighted in this compendium include:
- National Eating Disorder Association (NEDA);
- National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders (ANAD);
- The Body Positive;
- Eating Disorder Hope;
- Families Empowered and Supporting Treatment of Eating Disorders (F.E.A.S.T.); and
- The National Association for Males with Eating Disorders (N.A.M.E.D.).

References

The mission of The National Eating Disorders Association (NEDA) is to help individuals and families affected by eating disorders. NEDA helps with prevention, intervention, and getting individuals access to the care they need. NEDA raises awareness and provides resources that can help everyone along the way to receiving treatment. They provide a section on their website that gives information about each eating disorder and toolkits that could be useful for individuals. NEDA helps families and individuals get early intervention and the resources they need to begin working through the life-threatening illness. NEDA provides resources for the individual suffering from the eating disorder, as well as the families and friends that may be impacted by their loved one’s illness.

Human Trafficking

Human trafficking is a form of modern-day slavery, and it is an issue that impacts children and families in our communities. As such, it is an issue that school professionals need to understand because they have the potential to recognize and advocate for child victims by being aware of the risk factors and possible behavioral indicators of human trafficking (U.S. Department of Education, 2015). Human trafficking can be defined as “exploiting a person through force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of forced labor, commercial sex, or both” (U.S. Department of Education, 2015).

If school personnel (for example, administrators, teachers, bus drivers, food service staff, resource officers) are aware of the risk factors and warning signs, they will be able to recognize a potentially dangerous situation and intervene to help that child and family. Some of the risk factors associated with child trafficking include lack of personal safety, lack of social support, and a history of sexual abuse and/or dating violence. Some of the behavioral indicators include unexplained absences from school; sudden changes in personal hygiene, attire, behavior, relationships, or material possessions; and/or coached or rehearsed responses to questions (U.S. Department of Education, 2015).

After recognizing a child as a potential human trafficking victim, it is important to remember that these children are victims and to not judge them or blame them for the situation that they are in. Schools should have specific policies or protocols related to addressing (and preventing) issues of human trafficking affecting their students.

Human Trafficking Statistics:

- There are an estimated 20.9 million victims (adults and children) of human trafficking worldwide (International Labour Organization, 2012).
- Of those 20.9 million people, an estimated 5.5 million victims are children (International Labour Organization, 2012).
- In Ohio, an estimated 1,000 children are being trafficked every year, and an additional 3,000 children are at risk of becoming a victim of human trafficking (Williamson et al., 2010).
- The Ohio Attorney General’s Office reported 18,097 missing and runaway youth in 2014 (Ohio Attorney General’s Office, 2014).

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief that can be found at the following webpage: http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Human_Trafficking-What_Schools_Need_to_Know_Information_Brief_FINAL.pdf. This information brief describes human trafficking, including what schools and parents need to know.

Brief Description

The National Human Trafficking Resource Center (NHTRC) developed a slide show discussing every aspect of Human Trafficking. The purpose of the slide show is to raise awareness for educators. Thus, educators can take the information and continue to raise awareness in their lives. The slides discuss risks, facts, prevention, needs, how to respond, and more about child trafficking. The additional resources listed and the slide show seem to be used for educational purposes. The slideshow offers resources to help implement programs in schools.

Brief Description

Abolishing Injustice in the 21st Century (A21) offers many facts about human trafficking that people might not know and defines key terms. One powerful part of this website is the explanation about how people are trafficked. There is a circle chart that displays the percentages of individuals who were trafficked through various means. There is also a list of current-day slavery signs for people to be aware of everyday in case they are able to identify a situation. At the end of the home page there are many countries listed and you can click on the country and the hotline will be listed so someone can call the hotline in their country when they suspect a possible case. The mission is to end modern day slavery everywhere, and they operate in 11 countries around the world. They also have created curricula for many levels and individuals. They really want people to get involved to help raise awareness and end modern slavery.

Resources Provided

Brief Description

This document provides guidance for implementing programs in youth groups. The guide truly helps educators in the community who have a desire to teach youth about human trafficking. It covers many helpful topics for these educators. Recommended procedures, educational tools, resources, training materials, and recommended curricula and outreach programs are included making this a comprehensive guide. This guide provides things to strive for before implementing a program. The information in this guide can extend beyond school programs which is helpful for other individuals looking to raise awareness with children outside of school. There are many helpful checklists, definitions and information needed before starting a program. This guide is efficient in describing details, offering information, tips on how to educate certain populations and helpful support when starting from scratch.

Resources Provided

The entire document is a resource for people interested in designing a program or strategy to help educate about human trafficking.
Sexual Assault

What is sexual assault/abuse?
Child sexual assault and abuse have been defined in a number of ways by both social agencies and researchers. Some definitions include unwanted sexual experiences perpetrated by both adults and same-aged peers, while other definitions separate the two. Additionally, some definitions include both contact (for example, unwanted touching by another person) and non-contact experiences (such as being shown another person’s genitals without consent). Due to differences in definitions, as well as retrospective reporting (adults reporting on sexual assault or abuse experiences from their childhoods), child sexual assault and abuse statistics vary widely (Finkelhor, Shattuck, Turner, & Hamby, 2014).

Recently, researchers have conducted nationwide surveys with children (ages 1 month to 17 years) and their families to estimate sexual assault and abuse that occurred in the last 12 months, as well as within a child’s lifetime (Finkelhor, Ormrod, Turner, & Hamby, 2005; Finkelhor et al., 2014; Finkelhor, Turner, Shattuck, & Hamby, 2013). These surveys define sexual assault as any sexual victimization perpetrated by either a child or an adult during which there was sexual contact (such as rape or unwanted touching). In contrast, sexual abuse was defined as acts perpetrated by either a child or an adult including sexual assault, as well as flashing, sexual harassment and statutory sexual offenses (any sexual contact or non-contact abuse by an adult age 18 years or older perpetrated on a child age 16 years and younger).

Sexual assault/abuse statistics

Age. Statistics provided by the most recent national surveys indicated that within the previous 12 months, 7.5 percent of girls and 3.8 percent of boys ages 1 month to 17 years reported experiencing any type of sexual abuse (Finkelhor et al., 2013). However, rates of abuse were not the same across ages. For instance, only 2.1 percent of children ages 6 to 9 years reported sexual abuse in the past 12 months, whereas 16.4 percent of children ages 14 to 17 years reported sexual abuse (Finkelhor et al., 2013). Thus, as children age, they appear to be victimized at higher rates.

Gender. There also were significant differences between perpetration of sexual abuse against male and female children. Of those who reported they experienced sexual abuse in their lifetimes, 11.4 percent were girls and 7.8 percent were boys ages 1 month to 17 years (Finkelhor et al., 2013). However, for ages 14-17 years of age, 34.9 percent (about one in three) of girls and 20.2 percent (one in five) of boys reported they had been sexually abused during their lifetimes (Finkelhor et al., 2013). In addition, of the children who reported sexual abuse in the past 12 months, 22.8 percent (about one in five) were girls and 10.3 percent (one in 10) were boys ages 14 to 17 years (Finkelhor et al., 2013). Thus, although rates of victimization increase for both boys and girls as they age, girls appear to be victimized at higher rates than boys across the lifespan.

Perpetrator Type. A recent study that evaluated lifetime contact sexual abuse experiences (for example, rape or unwanted touching) of children ages 14 to 17 years found that more than half of the experiences were perpetrated by another person under the age of 18 years: The majority of which were peers known to the survivor (Finkelhor et al., 2014). Of the experiences perpetrated by adults, the majority were perpetrated by family members or persons known to the child (such as a caregiver or neighbor) (Finkelhor et al., 2014). Thus, the majority of children were victimized by either an adult or peer who was known to them.

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief that http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Sexual_Assault_Awareness_Information_Brief_Final.pdf describes sexual assault and abuse, including what schools and parents need to know. This can be used as another resource, in addition to the ones listed in this compendium.

Resources Provided

RAINN provides information and resources in the following areas:

- About Sexual Assault: Provides information on sexual assault, including statistics, laws in each state, types of sexual violence, effects of sexual violence, consent, and statutes of limitations.
- Safety & Prevention: You can take an active role in increasing your safety or the safety of those you care about. While there’s no way to eliminate the chance that something may happen, there are strategies that may reduce your risk or give you the confidence to step in to prevent a sexual assault. This section includes strategies for parents and students; warning signs; and tips for staying safe, protecting others, and online safety.
- After Sexual Assault: After sexual assault, it’s hard to know how to react. You may be physically hurt, emotionally drained, or unsure what to do next. You may be considering working with the criminal justice system but are unsure of where to start. Learning more about what steps you can take following sexual violence can help ground you in a difficult time. This section involves suggestions for steps to take after a sexual assault, including recovery and/or reporting.
- Public Policy & Action: Find information about laws in your state, learn more about the issues, and learn about current action to prevent/reduce sexual violence. This section includes the RAINN Action Center and information on how RAINN is working with lawmakers. You can also get involved by tweeting or emailing Congress.
- About RAINN: Provides information on RAINN's mission, programs and expertise, leadership and governance, spokespersons and supporters, corporate partners, and sexual assault service providers.
- Get Involved: There are as many ways to get involved as there are willing volunteers. You can support survivors by volunteering for the National Sexual Assault Hotline, fundraising for RAINN, spreading the word on social media to educate others about sexual assault prevention and recovery, and/or getting involved with student activism. This section also includes survivor stories, which can be submitted to RAINN.

Brief Description

The Dru Sjodin National Sex Offender Public Website (NSOPW) is an unprecedented public safety resource that provides the public with access to sex offender data nationwide. NSOPW is a partnership between the U.S. Department of Justice and state, territorial, and tribal governments, working together for the safety of adults and children.

Resources Provided

NSOPW provides information and resources in the following areas:

- Search: This is provided as a public service by the U.S. Department of Justice. Using this Website, interested members of the public have access to and may search participating Jurisdiction Website public information regarding the presence or location of offenders who, in most cases, have been convicted of sexually violent offenses against adults and children and certain sexual contact and other crimes against victims who are minors. The public can use this Website to educate themselves about the possible presence of such offenders in their local communities.

- Education & Prevention: The information contained on this portion of NSOPW will assist you in learning the facts about sexual abuse and help you protect yourself and loved ones from potential victimization. It involves information for talking to your child, recognizing sexual abuse, help and support for victims, common questions, resources and materials, and facts and statistics.

- FAQ: This page includes frequently asked questions and answers, regarding use of the NSOPW.
The Sexual Assault Youth Support Network (SAYSN), an organization created and cultivated by sexual assault victims and survivors, strives to create an inclusive, safe, and resourceful community that is specifically for young sexual assault victims. In addition to providing basic support and access to recovery resources for young individuals who may not have access to them on their own—due to financial instability, lack of familial support, or personal reluctance—SAYSN strives to provide victims with a network and community that offers support, guidance, and safety. Further, SAYSN strives to extend resources and information to those who are close to sexual assault survivors and want to support them; SAYSN aspires to enact social change, to address issues of victim blaming, and to provide preventative education in the interest of reducing the rate of violent crimes against children. Moreover, it is the priority of the SAYSN—not only as a network of survivors, but as a network of activists—to take a simultaneously proactive and reactive approach to sexual assault; though it may prove difficult to completely eradicate sexual assault, measures can be taken to raise awareness, teach about prevention, and create a safer and more welcoming approach to victim reporting, advocacy, and support.

Resources Provided

SAYSN provides information and resources in the following areas:

- About: Read about SAYSN’s mission, leadership, and how to join their team.
- For survivors: Explore popular articles about emotional, social, and legal support. All articles are written by and for sexual assault survivors, sometimes with the assistance of legal or mental health professionals. You can also read through the different sexual offense statutes and statute of limitations in your state, learn your Title IX and victims’ rights, what to do if they are violated, and more.
- For supporters: Explore articles about supporting sexual assault survivors in your life. Though you may not have undergone the direct trauma of sexual assault—you may face emotional confusion, cognitive dissonance, or questions about how to effectively support the sexual assault survivors you may know. To cover a wide range of topics within articles, they are coordinated into categories of accepting, coping, supporting, and contributing. By reading these articles, written by other supporters and survivors with the help of mental health or legal professionals—you can effectively learn personal coping, support strategies, and how to contribute to the cause of SAYSN. There are also links to information to learn about sexual offense statutes and the statute of limitations in your state, understand the legal/judicial processes of reporting and prosecuting sexual assault cases, and to find resources for supporters of sexual assault survivors.
- Public outreach: Learn about SAYSN’s past, present, and future public outreach projects, including the “I Am” Series and much more.
- Resource Directory: Though SAYSN offers an online survivor network and information about coping with sexual assault, survivors are encouraged to also seek help within their community. This page allows survivors to click on their state and find localized resources (e.g., where to report a sexual assault, support groups, mental health counseling, and other therapeutic resources).
- Contact us: You can contact SAYSN with any comments, questions, or suggestions.
Substance Use/Abuse

Adolescents are often less likely to realize they need help or seek treatment for substance abuse compared to adults (National Institute on Drug Abuse, 2017). This makes it especially important for parents, caregivers and school professionals to be able to recognize the signs and symptoms, so they can refer students suffering from substance abuse disorders for help. Some of the signs and symptoms associated with substance abuse are listed below (Get Smart About Drugs: A DEA Resource, 2017):

- Problems at school:
  - Forgetting homework often;
  - Missing classes/being absent;
  - Drop in grades;
  - Not showing interest in school or school activities.

- Physical signs:
  - Lack of energy or motivation;
  - Red eyes or cheeks;
  - Difficulty focusing;
  - Strange burn on mouth or fingers;
  - Chronic nosebleeds.

- Behavioral indicators:
  - Excessive attempts at privacy (excessive alone time, not allowing family in their room);
  - Not telling you where they are or who they are with;
  - Changes in family relationships;
  - Changes in friends;
  - Money issues (sudden requests for money without reason, stealing money or other items from home).

If you notice any of these signs, it is important that you refer the child/adolescent for treatment and support. Additionally, substance abuse should be treated as a mental illness (Kellogg & Tatarsky, 2013). Substance abusers are individuals in need of support, treatment and understanding. It is not a character flaw or something they are able to control or manage on their own. Individuals who are using or abusing substances often have other underlying mental health problems. It is necessary to address these issues in addition to the actual substance use (Kellogg & Tatarsky, 2013).

Project AWARE Ohio developed an information brief (http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Substance_Abuse_Info_Brief_FINAL.pdf) that describes substance use and abuse, including what schools and parents need to know. This can be used as another resource, in addition to the ones listed in this compendium.

Brief Description

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) is an agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services whose mission is to advance science on the causes and consequences of drug use and addiction and to apply that knowledge to improve individual and public health. There are particular sections of the website dedicated to parents & educators, as well as children & teens. SAMHSA’s mission is to reduce the impact of substance abuse and mental illness on America’s communities.

Resources Provided

SAMHSA provides information and resources in the following areas:

- Find Help and Treatment: This page includes a behavioral health treatment services locator, a buprenorpheine physician & treatment program locator (i.e., physicians and treatment programs authorized to treat opioids, such as heroin or pain relievers), an opioid treatment program directory, and several different helplines:
  - Suicide Prevention lifeline: 1-800-273-TALK (8255), TTY: 1-800-799-4889
  - SAMHSA’s National Helpline: 1-800-662-HELP (4357), TTY: 1-800-487-4889
  - Disaster Distress Helpline: 1-800-985-5990
  - Drug-Free Workplace: 1-800-WORKPLACE (967-5752)

- Topics: Learn about the many topics that highlight SAMHSA’s efforts to prevent and reduce the impact of mental illness and substance abuse in America’s communities. Topics include prevention of substance abuse & mental illness, behavioral health treatments & services, recovery and recovery support, and many more.

- Programs & Campaigns: SAMHSA’s programs and campaigns offer information, training, and technical assistance to improve the quality and delivery of behavioral health services across the nation. This page includes a search box where you can search for programs, campaigns, initiatives, technical assistance centers, or resource centers.

- Grants: SAMHSA makes grant funds available through the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention, the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment, and the Center for Mental Health Services. On this page, you can find funding opportunities that support programs for substance use disorders and mental illness, and learn about the grant application, review, and management process. You can also search for grant awards by state.

- Data: SAMHSA has prioritized data, outcomes, and quality – realizing an integrated data strategy and a national framework for quality improvement in behavioral health care will inform policy, measure program impact, and lead to improved quality of services and outcomes of individuals, families, and communities. Data helps SAMHSA and the nation assess the impact of the changes to US health care systems and identify and address behavioral health disparities. This page includes descriptions of the types of data SAMHSA collects, state & metro reports, quality metrics, evaluation & services, behavioral health outcomes, and data resources (e.g., SAMHSA’s National Registry of Evidence-Based Programs and Practices).
• About Us: This page includes information about SAMHSA’s purpose and mission statement, strategic initiatives, social media, interagency activities, advisory councils, budget, and jobs/internships.

• Publications: This page sorts journal articles/publications by issues, conditions & disorders; substances; treatment, prevention & recovery; professional & research topics; location; and series.
Suicide

Each day, there are, on average, about 121 completed suicides. It is the 10th most common cause of death, and it can be prevented. There are many ways we can help prevent suicide.

The first step is to know the risk factors and warning signs surrounding it. There is not one single cause, it is very comorbid with other disorders. Most likely, there are stressors in an individual's life that exceed the coping abilities they are willing or able to put forth. There are three types of risk factors for suicide: health, environmental and historical. Health includes mental health, substance abuse or any chronic pain. Environmental encompasses all stressful life events, access to lethal means and other stress factors. Historical includes family history of suicide or past attempts. There also are three main categories of warning signs: talk, behavior and mood. For talk, it is mainly when the conversation with the person is about death, pain or being a burden to others. For behavior, some signs include the person isolating him or herself from friends and family and withdrawing from activities. Finally, for mood, there are signs such as depression, loss of interest and rage.

Regarding treatment of suicidal ideation, there are treatments for major depression, (medications, psychotherapies, electroconvulsive therapy (in severe cases, typically a last resort)), treatments for bipolar disorder (mood stabilizers such as lithium, mood stabilizing anticonvulsants or antipsychotics), and treatments for alcohol and drug abuse (psychosocial component). Currently, the only medication approved by the FDA for suicide risk reduction in patients with schizophrenia is clozapine. Many other medications are used to treat depression (such as antidepressants); there are about 22 approved by FDA. Some of the most common psychotherapies are cognitive behavior therapy (CBT), interpersonal therapy (IPT), behavioral activation (BH) and cognitive behavioral analysis system of psychotherapy (CBASP). Hopefully, there will be research done soon to find even more treatments and interventions for suicidology.

Self-Harm/Non-Suicidal Self Injury

Non-suicidal self-injury (NSSI) refers to when a person intentionally harms him or herself but does not have any intent to kill him or herself (Klonsky, Victor, & Saffer, 2014). There are a number of ways people injure themselves including cutting, burning, biting, bruising, scratching, constricting, inhaling, picking and scalding (Shapiro, 2008). Of all the methods, cutting is the most common form of non-suicidal self-injury; however, most people who self-injure engage in multiple methods (Klonsky et al., 2014; Shapiro, 2008). Although there are a number of reasons why people self-harm, some of the most common reasons why people self-harm in rank order are: 1) To temporarily alleviate overwhelming negative emotions; 2) To punish themselves; and 3) To produce a physical sign of emotional distress (Klonsky et al., 2014).

Although people engage in self-injury across the lifespan, self-injury is most common in adolescents and typically begins when individuals are 13 to 14 years of age (Klonsky et al., 2014). Research has indicated that anywhere between 15 to 23 percent of adolescents report engaging in non-suicidal self-injury; however, more recent community samples have indicated that anywhere between 33 to 50 percent of adolescents have reported engaging in non-suicidal self-injury (Klonsky et al., 2014; Peterson, Freedenthal, Sheldon, & Andersen, 2008; Shapiro, 2008). In contrast, only 6 percent of adults report engaging in these types of behaviors (Klonsky et al., 2014). Recent research has indicated that neither men nor women self-injure more; however, men and women tend to engage in different methods of self-injury. More specifically, women are more likely to engage in cutting as a self-injury method, whereas men are more likely to engage in hitting or burning themselves (Klonsky et al., 2014). Self-injury has been shown to be more prevalent among people who report non-heterosexual orientations such as lesbian, gay, bisexual and questioning. Research also has revealed that individuals who identify as European American/Caucasian are more likely to engage in self-injury compared to other ethnic or racial groups (for example, African American/Black, Latino/Hispanic, Asian/Asian American; Klonsky et al., 2014).

Non-suicidal self-injury is different from suicide in a number of ways: 1) Non-suicidal self-injury is much more prevalent than suicide; 2) Non-suicidal self-injury results in less medically severe and less lethal bodily harm than suicide attempts; 3) Most often, people engage in non-suicidal self-injury without having suicidal ideation; and 4) People who engage in non-suicidal self-injury do not intend to end their own lives (Klonsky et al., 2014). Although people who engage in non-suicidal self-injury do not intend to end their own lives, engaging in non-suicidal self-injury can increase a person’s risk for suicide. More specifically, individuals who self-injure reduce their fear of self-inflicted injury and sensitivity to pain. This reduction in fear and sensitivity increases their capabilities to act on suicidal behaviors in the future when they become distressed (Klonsky et al., 2014). In fact, a recent study found that 70 percent of adolescents who engaged in non-suicidal self-injury had made at least one suicide attempt, and 55 percent had made multiple suicide attempts (Peterson et al., 2008).

Brief Description

The Self-Injury and Recovery Research and Resources (SIRRR) at Cornell University is a website filled with various information and resources over self-harming behaviors. These resources have been compiled as the Cornell research program has been developed and discovered different trends in this new and complicated behavior. With the help of staff, researchers, clinicians, educators, and students, their expansive research has been translated into user-friendly materials, available to the public on this site.

Resources Provided

The Self-Injury and Recovery Research and Resources (SIRRR) provides a number of different resources:

- Individual-specific resource compilations for:
  - People who self-injure
  - Parents & other caring adults
  - Friends
  - Therapists/clinicians
  - Youth serving professionals
- Helpful website compilation
- Books and Articles: List of helpful books over self-injury and its treatment.
- Tools and Assessments: List of various tools useful in the treatment and diagnosis of self-injury and self-harm.
- Interviews and Documentary Films: Numerous different interviews and films provided here in order to provide more personal anecdotes about self-harm.
- Training: Non-suicidal self-injury 101 training for individuals who need to know what exactly a significant amount of self-injury is, where it comes from typically, how to respond to these individuals and occurrences, and what the best course of treatment and action would be.

Recover Your Life (RYL)

URL

| URL | http://www.recoveryourlife.com/ |

Brief Description

Recover Your Life (RYL) is one of the biggest self-harm support communities on the internet. They are known for helping people who suffer with self-harm, but also welcome and support people with other issues such as Eating Disorders, Mental Health problems, those dealing with Abuse, and many more.

Resources Provided

- Articles: The site provides a number of different articles outlining information about self-harm, and the different solutions and treatments available.
- Forums: By becoming a member of RYL, one can gain access to a number of different forums discussing various topics, ranging from general support and advice to abuse and bullying support, all accessible by the RYL community.
- Chat and Live Help: RYL provides a number of different chat rooms for easily accessible advice and instant support from others and divides these chat rooms by severity of chat in order to avoid triggers for particular individuals.
- E-zine: Comes out monthly and provides information as to what RYL has been up to, and new information that has become available about self-harm.
- Distractions: A specific section on distractions is provided on the site and contains plenty of information as to how to possibly beat urges to self-harm, as well as providing different fun, distracting online games to victims.
Trauma

Although several definitions for trauma have been proposed, the U.S. Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) conceptualizes trauma as:

“Individual trauma results from an event, series of events, or set of circumstances that is experienced by an individual as physically or emotionally harmful or life threatening and that has lasting adverse effects on the individual’s functioning and mental, physical, social, emotional, or spiritual well-being.”
(SAMHSA, 2014)

Unfortunately, such traumatic experiences are a reality for many children. The Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) study is one of the most well-known studies on youth trauma in the U.S. Defining ACEs as any personal experience of abuse, neglect or household dysfunction, researchers have found that more than two-thirds of the study’s 17,337 participants reported at least one ACE, and more than one in five reported three or more ACEs (CDC, 2014). Furthermore, the study found that as individuals’ number of ACEs increased, risk for mental and physical health concerns — such as depression, suicide attempts, alcohol abuse, early initiation of smoking and risk for intimate partner violence — also increased (CDC, 2014).

Although adversity cannot be completely prevented, and mild everyday adversity can actually provide benefits for daily functioning (SAMHSA, 2014), educators have a unique opportunity and responsibility to support resilience in children who have experienced traumatic situations. Project AWARE Ohio produced an information brief titled Trauma-Informed Schools (http://resources.oberlinkconsulting.com/uploads/infobriefs/Project_AWARE_Ohio_Trauma_Brief.pdf) that provides information on the impact of childhood trauma, possible signs of trauma and ways to create more trauma-responsive school environments. More resources for creating trauma-informed environments are provided on the following pages.

The National Center for Trauma-Informed Care (NCTIC) supports interest in developing approaches to eliminate the use of seclusion, restraints, and other coercive practices and to further advance the knowledge base related to implementation of trauma-informed approaches. NCTIC is funded by the SAMHSA Center for Mental Health Services (CMHS). The purpose and mission of NCTIC is to offer consultation and technical assistance, education and outreach, and resources to support a broad range of service systems, including systems providing mental health and substance abuse services, housing and homelessness services, HIV services, peer and family organizations, child welfare, criminal justice, and education.

NCTIC provides information and resources in the following areas:

- Training and Technical Assistance is provided to a range of service systems that prioritizes integration of peer voices and empowerment of people served.
  - Training may be offered virtually through virtual learning networks; webcasts and webinars; in-person over several hours or days to specific programs, agencies, or systems; or via downloadable technical assistance materials.
  - They also provide technical assistance and consultation to support systems and programs that are committed to implementing trauma-informed approaches to service delivery.
- Trauma-Informed Approach and Trauma-Specific Interventions: SAMHSA's six key principles of a trauma-informed approach and trauma-specific interventions address trauma's consequences and facilitate healing. This page describes these six principles as well as other aspects of effective trauma-specific interventions.
- Resources: This includes links to federally supported resources. NCTIC also provides hotlines and referral resources for informational purposes only (listed below). SAMHSA and NCTIC do not expressly endorse any of these.
- Hotlines:
  - National Domestic Violence Hotline: 800-799-SAFE (800-799-7233) and 800-787-3224 (TTY)

Brief Description
The Ohio Departments of Mental Health and Addiction Services (OhioMHAS) and Developmental Disabilities (DODD) collaborate on a statewide Trauma-Informed Care (TIC) Initiative intended to promote a greater sense of safety, security, and equality among consumers/clients. TIC is an approach that explicitly acknowledges the role trauma plays in people’s lives. TIC means that every part of an organization or program understands the impact of trauma on the individuals they serve and adopts a culture that considers and addresses this impact.

Resources Provided
Ohio’s Trauma-Informed Care Initiative website provides the following information and resources:
- Ohio Voices on Video: This page includes videos of people involved with the TIC Collaborative talking about their perspectives on trauma and hope for healing.
- Resource Library: Provides access to numerous TIC resources, sorted by category (e.g., adults, bullying, disabilities, LGBTQ, etc.)
- Trauma & Adults: Information and resources to support adults who have experienced trauma
- Trauma & Children: Provides information on the impact of trauma on children and interventions that may be effective
- OhioMHAS Regional Psychiatric Hospitals: Links to regional hospitals and resources related to trauma
- TIC Regional Collaboratives: As part of the TIC Initiative, six Regional TIC Collaboratives are being formed to identify strengths, gaps, and barriers to TIC implementation and to promote TIC implementation throughout the state of Ohio. Resources and trainers are listed under the tabs on this page for each regional collaborative.
Brief Description

The National Child Traumatic Stress Network (NCTSN) was created to raise the standard of care and increase access to services for children and families who experience or witness traumatic events. NCTSN.org is a resource for the public, professionals, and others who care about children and are concerned about child traumatic stress.

Resources Provided

NCTSN.org provides the following information and resources:

- What is Child Trauma? gives information on what child trauma is, different types of trauma, and populations who are at risk
- Treatments and Practices: Includes treatments that work, screening and assessment practices, Psychological First Aid (PFA) and Skills for Psychological Recovery (SPR), and the Core Curriculum on Childhood Trauma (CCCT; an innovative approach to providing mental health clinicians with foundational knowledge and case conceptualization skills)
- Trauma-Informed Care: Provides resources and information on creating trauma-informed systems, culture and trauma, families and trauma, family-youth-provider partnerships, and secondary traumatic stress
- Resources: Includes resources on child trauma developed by the NCTSN. Specific topics or resources can be found by entering keywords in the search box or filtering by resource type, trauma type, language, or audience. This page also involves training opportunities, information/resources in Spanish (información en Español), and resources to raise public awareness about the scope and impact of child traumatic stress.

Acknowledgements

We would like to acknowledge the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Agency (SAMSHA) and the Ohio Department of Education for supporting the creation of this compendium through Ohio's Project AWARE. The compendium was compiled by Morgan Cody, Hannah Dinnen, and Katherine Knauft from Miami University, with assistance and feedback from staff and affiliates of the Ohio Department of Education (ODE), Miami University's Center for School-Based Mental Health Programs (CSBMHP), Project AWARE Ohio, and the Ohio Mental Health Network for School Success (OMHNSS). The contributions from individuals within these organizations – including Emily Jordan, Cricket Meehan, and Kathy Oberlin – were instrumental in bringing this project to fruition.

Please note: This compendium was developed [in part] under grant number CFDA 93.243 from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). The views, policies, and opinions expressed are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect those of SAMHSA or HHS.
